

Tasmanian scientists featured include:

Dr Pattie Virtue, IMAS researcher in the field of Antarctic and sub-Antarctic fauna and biodiversity. Much of her work involves studying krill and their feeding habits under the sea ice.

Dr Jonny Stark, AAD benthic ecologist who is holding a creature called a crinoid (Promachocrinus kauruvulensis), a relative of the sea star which 'dances' in a mesmerising way. Dr Stark headed up the Antarctic Free Ocean Carbon Enrichment (AntFOCE) project, which was at Casey Station, Antarctica, during the 2015-
