For both of those strategies to persist in the one population it suggests that neither one of them is consistently better than the other, because if that were the case one strategy to dominate and the other one would simply die out.

interesting because it helps us to understand how populations evolve and the role of individual differences, as well as showing