Professor Carter said the research would also contribute to selective breeding and aquaculture management