

Friday, 13 September 2019

---

Things adrift in the ocean advance to Biennale

The Institute of Marine and Antarctic Studies (IMAS) Hobart-based Adrift Lab has been announced as a participating artist in the 22nd Biennale of Sydney, to be held from March to June 2020.

Adrift Lab is a dedicated group of researchers from across the globe studying all things adrift in the ocean, including plastic, chemicals, and wildlife. Members from across the Cultural Organisation.

32 XU ZRUN IHDWXUHV WKH LPSDFWV RI PDULQH SODVWLF DW W
Lord Howe Island, the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, and Henderson Island.

The 2020 instalment, titled NIRIN, will feature 98 artists hosted across six sites in Sydney from 14 March to 18 June.

Media contact:
Duncan Abey
Communications Manager, College of Sciences and Engineering
0409 324 398 or Duncan.Abey@utas.edu.au

Information released by:
Communications Office
University of Tasmania