

"They will learn about living, working and doing research in Antarctica, visiting a range of international research stations and taking part in discussions about how the 'gateway' cities can together act as custodians of the region.

"We want them together to think of ways of fostering a sense of Antarctic