

Tuesday 9 June 2015

---

Up to 100 international scientists are in Hobart this week for meetings and workshops focusing on implementing an international system for observing environmental change in the Southern Ocean, a region that encompasses Tasmanian waters.

Organised by the Ocean Observing System (SOOS), the international workshops start tomorrow, June 10, at the Hobart headquarters of the University of Institute for Marine and Coastal Studies,

