

Northern:

Hear how harnessing the ocean's energy could create a sustainable supply of power during the Science Open Season at Queen Victoria Museum and find out the relevance of the Ocean Energy Centre at the University of Tasmania's special talk.

North West:

Try out new technologies during drop-in workshops in the University's CollabLab at West Park in Burnie, or join enquiring minds and experts for a pop-up panel exploring the concept of STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts and Mathematics) at the Burnie Community Centre. In Ulverstone, Tastrofest will encourage locals to track up and examine

Dr Adele Wilson from the University of Tasmania said that Tassie Scientists are on the road bringing 4,000 students of all ages from Dover to King Island, Scottsdale to

“It's a great experience for school students as well as the themselves we to share the research they are so passionate about.” Dr Wilson said.

“It's a great experience for school students as well as the themselves we to share the research they are so passionate about.”

The Science Identification Awards will also headline the University's month of science, challenging hundreds of young students to investigate a scientific Thursday, 25 September; Thursday, 1 September at the Cradle Coast campus; and Thursday, 15 September at Sandy Bay