

Thursday 7 November 2019

More than 100 researchers from the University of Tasmania and CSIRO will next week be joined by international experts for a five-day workshop at IMAS in Hobart on the future of the

"The researchers will be joined by representatives from Greenland, Finland, Taiwan, Canada, Papua New Guinea, New Zealand and Australia to articulate their future vision for the oceans from an Indigenous perspective.

"The workshop will discuss what the oceans may look like by 2030 on current trends, and how we can work together to make a difference.

"Our goal is to develop possible actions through this process that could be part of local, regional and global plans during the UN Ocean Science Decade," Professor Pecl said.

Andrew Rhodes (03) 6226 6683, email: ajrhodes@utas.edu.au

Information released by: